

Race and anti-racism resources

We are well aware that white people have long ignored the stories of Black and Asian people. We acknowledge that we must learn to listen, hear, and engage urgently with their experiences.

To give us somewhere to start, we have collected a whole range of media that we hope will help you to hear different voices from the white-dominated culture around us.

If text is underlined, it is linked to a place you can purchase the book or access the media. The lists are in no particular order and you will find media you resonate with and ones you don't. We hope it is simply helpful to have it all in one place.

Please contact us at info@stjamesinthecity.org.uk if you think there are obvious omissions from the lists below.

Four actions to begin with:

These come from Ruth Yimika Afolabi, founder and editor in chief of Magnify:

- Pray for families affected and countless other victims of racial injustice.
- Explore how Jesus treated the oppressed and the marginalised.
- Consider researching organisations local to you that align with your values and are fighting against racial injustice.
- Prioritise taking time out to talk and understand the experiences of those who are different to you.

A few places to start:
